

Honour for Radar Development

AS ONE who has been closely associated with the work of H. J. H. Wassell I cannot let the award to him of the O.B.E., announced in the Coronation Honours List, pass without some expression of the pleasure we all feel.

Unfortunately, one still cannot speak of his work—it is of such vital importance to our country—but one can simply say that few men could have carried the load which he has so cheerfully borne.

There is no doubt that by the efforts of Wassell, his team, and all the others who have played their parts, the prestige of the Marconi Company with Her Majesty's Government stands higher than it has ever done even in a history crowded with great achievements.

New Building for Writtle

The new drawing office at Writtle is growing at speed. Climbing up to talk to the Contractor's foreman, P. H. Wheeler (on the roof) is J. Eaton, Surveyor's Section . . .

. . . who designed the building under the direction of R. Sargent, Plant Engineer. The new drawing office will have a fine teak floor, and the lighting is first-class.
